All rates are exclusive VAT.

Dues are liable to change without prior notice.

It is the duty of the users of the port, i.e. the master or the ship's agent, to give all information necessary to calculate and levy the dues and on request from the port personnel to produce ship documents, shipping documents and weight documentation, etc.

Before a ship sails, whether the ship has loaded, unloaded or merely been lying in the port, all dues must be paid or otherwise secured for the Port of Skagen.

2.2. Cleaning

Spillage in the port areas, including basins, in connection with laying up, loading and unloading or other forms of goods handling must be cleaned to such an extent that the environmental demands in force are respected.

If merchandise or goods are dropped into the harbour basins, it is also the duty of the cargo owner to collect them from the basins. All affected areas must be cleaned immediately after termination of the goods handling. If this does not happen, the Port of Skagen is entitled to have the cleaning carried out for the account of the cargo owner.

3. CALLING SHIPS

3.1. Shipping dues ordinary terms

All ships, vessels and floating equipment calling at the Port of Skagen pay dues (shipping dues) for lying in the Port of Skagen. The shipping dues rest with the owner of the ship or its operator.

The shipping dues will be calculated on the whole Gross Tonnage of the ship (GT), either per call or per month. The Gross Tonnage of the ships is calculated in accordance with the International Convention on Tonnage Measurement of Ships, 1969, which became effective as per 18 July 1994.

A ship, vessel or other floating equipment is considered to be lying in the harbour from the day of arrival. The shipping dues cover the vessel's stay in the port for 7 days, counted from the day of arrival.

A ship is considered to have arrived when the first hawser has been placed on the bollard (the quay). A ship is considered to have sailed when the last hawser has no contact with the quay.

If ships or floating equipment remain for more than 1 week, a quay due has to be paid for the next two-week period and the following periods instead of shipping dues.

See chapter 4. Quay dues.

At all times, dues will be paid according to the condition in which the ship calls at the port.
